Paper boats and getting soaked... Childhood was probably the only time we really enjoyed the rains, right? Years later, we're cooped up adults in offices or sulk pots bundled up in our bed all monsoons. Okay we aren't suggesting you head out (and eat soggy samosas) when it's pouring but here's the next best offer: Covered rooftops. These cafes in the city are ideal if you want to enjoy the lush rain-washed greens from the comfort of a big window or a glass ceiling.

We've been meaning to check out this Civil Lines stunner for a while but haven't gotten around to making a trip that side of town. If BOA Village is in your vicinity, you gotta make a trip just to sit under that transparent roof and eat their much-hyped momo pizza.

Imperfecto

This Gurgaon cafe is almost as if it were meant for idling away hours. The skyline looks gorgeous and there are pancakes, sandwiches, soups and Kashmiri Kahwa (read quintessential comfort food) that'll offer all the solace if you've gotten soaked. If you're lucky, it might be raining and it might be a Tuesday so kiddos will eat for free.

Find yourself around Shahpur Jat on an exceptionally cloudy day? Head right over to The Potbelly Rooftop Cafe whose cute interiors and big French Windows will shield you well and keep you happily gorging on litti, keema Maggi, Dehati Fish n' Chips and sattu paratha. Get yourself Apple Lemonade to while away more time.

Very few restaurants do Bengali and Armenian cuisines but this place does both and does it so well! They also have adorable cushioned seating in different colours and you'd be tempted to post multiple stories on Instagram. If it is a good day, you may even get a glimpse of the Qutub Minar.

Fig & Maple
